History

It was a perfect day with daily homework, with good grades, the teachers didn't make a problem for me, but that day came where everything changed; I was top of the class until I lost everything. If I had studied I would have won the exam, since then I fell into a terrible depression I must always be perfect in front of my parents and others, if I had not been late I would have seen the entire class but no. But a motivation came that it was my sister since she always trusts me, she told me: if you have mistakes I will fix them, and it is only an exam there will be many so I want to see that smiling face. At that time I started to work harder but another mistake arose. I had to do a very complicated English test, but if we lived in the United States it would be easier and I would learn faster but good. When my sister heard those words, I spoke with my parents on the phone and told them about everything they supported me after that, if I had been kind to them and not to throw myself into depression, I would not have offended myself
